

Mind of a Scientist

As early as the 1500s, Leonardo da Vinci introduced the Scientific Method, still in use today. He advocated observation and documentation, and his studies led him into anatomy, zoology, botany, geology, optics, aerodynamics, hydrodynamics, and more.

Spirit of an Inventor

Da Vinci adapted his drawing skills to the lucrative fields of architecture, military engineering, canal building, and weapons design. He was determined to build "new machines" for a "new world." He developed hundreds of inventions, including early work with hydroelectric power.

Soul of an Artist

By the time he was 20, da Vinci was a celebrated artist, in part because his scientific and engineering discipline gave his artistic subjects unmatched depth. Da Vinci believed that the artist must know not just the rules of perspective, but all the laws of nature.

*The eye, he believed,
was the perfect instrument
for learning the laws
of nature, and the artist
the perfect person to illustrate them.*

Leonardo da Vinci was the original Renaissance Man

HE IS THE FATHER OF THE SCIENTIFIC METHOD, STILL IN USE HALF A MILLENNIUM LATER.

HE INVENTED THE BICYCLE, A HELICOPTER, AN AUTOMOBILE, AND GRUESOME WEAPONS OF WAR.

HIS ARTISTIC TECHNIQUES CHANGED THE WAY ART WOULD BE CREATED AND ENJOYED forever.

A WHOLE NEW DA VINCI

Not only a master artist, but a master of the natural sciences, technology, and physiology.

If you have been mesmerized by his brush strokes, wait until you see the engineering underneath...
